

History Through The Ages

In 1778, some of the fashionable women of Paris wore a lightening rod attached to their hats in bad weather.

Some Romans, like to eat snails fattened on milk, peacocks' brains and flamingos' tongues.

In Victorian Britain whooping cough was treated by eating a spider in butter.

Roman Empire Caligula made his horse a Senator

Beethoven poured iced water over his head to stimulate his brain to write music.

The 16th Century Escorial Palace of King Philip 2nd of Spain had 1,200 doors.

Do you know your history?

In ancient Greece a wise man named Diogenes lived in a barrel, to show people that he had no need for riches.

Celtic Warriors sometimes fought battles naked, painted from head to toe in blue dye.

Amazing Facts

During Peter The Great's Reign in Russia, some men had to pay a beard tax.